Summary

An AllSides analysis of Yahoo! News found that the website aggregates stories from sources AllSides rates as on the left far more often than sources from the right.

An analysis of 588 curated articles published by Yahoo! News in April 2022 showed that 65% were from a media outlet that AllSides rates as on the left (Left, Lean Left), and just 5% were from outlets AllSides rates as on the right (Right, Lean Right).

Further, Yahoo! News' homepage – when uncustomized by the reader – favored the left. In a 10-day period spanning from late April to early May 2022, 55% of the top 15 stories featured on

Background

Yahoo! News is a news website that primarily features aggregated content from various sources, such as The Associated Press, The Hill, Fox News, and many others. It also produces original content and reporting.

As of May 2022, the AllSides Media Bias Rating for Yahoo! News overall (taking into account both curated and original content) was Lean Left. The outlet was previously rated Left until September 2019, when the AllSides team conducted a formal Editorial Review and moved the rating.

In July 2021, an AllSides Blind Bias Survey was conducted and also returned a Lean Left rating. This analysis, however, only asked respondents to rate original content from Yahoo, and did not ask respondents to rate curated articles.

Yahoo! News is one of the most-visited news websites in the United States, with an estimated 175 million unique visitors per month as of May 1, 2022.

The website allows readers to customize their content. In other words, readers can decide to “hide” news sources they are not interested in viewing (see image below).

Purpose & Methodology

The purpose of AllSides’ comprehensive media bias analysis of Yahoo! was to determine the political bias of the media outlets that Yahoo! most often curates. AllSides tracked the outlets that appeared on Yahoo! News’ homepage for a set period of time to determine the AllSides Media Bias Rating of the outlets most-often curated by the news aggregator. The research also unveils the frequency with which outlets on the left and right appear on the homepage.

All news stories, regardless of topic (political news, weather, sports, etc.) were analyzed to help paint a more comprehensive picture of Yahoo! News.

AllSides only took the media outlet into account – not the content itself – for this analysis. For example, any article curated from Insider was considered Lean Left, reflecting the outlet’s AllSides Media Bias Rating at the time. (AllSides does not rate the bias of individual articles, only media outlets overall).

Content was collected using two methods:

Content Collection: Method 1

For the first method of our comprehensive media bias analysis, AllSides collected Yahoo! News’ curated and original news content published to its RSS feed.

AllSides collected content published between April 26, 2022, and April 30th, 2022 – 588 stories in total.

AllSides applied the AllSides Media Bias Rating of the original source of the content to each of the 588 articles (including Yahoo! News’ original content). Articles from Associated Press were considered to be Lean Left, articles from Fox News were considered to be Right, and so forth.

The goal of method 1 of this analysis was to get a more comprehensive look at the types of content published on Yahoo! News. Of course, not all content published may make it to the front page of the website, especially for users that have customized content, and this method had the objective of accounting for some of that nuance.

Content Collection: Method 2

The second method involved pulling the top 15 headlines from Yahoo! News’ homepage (news.yahoo.com) on 10 consecutive days at 12pm ET each day. The first round of headlines was pulled on April 26, 2022, and the last was pulled on May 5, 2022.

In an effort to be as objective as possible in the analysis, methods were taken to ensure that results would not be affected by the location or other variables that could impact the display of articles on the website. This included fingerprint spoofing, cookie blocking, WebGL blocking, a VPN, and other methods.. This helped to paint a better picture of what the site would look like to a first-time user who had not customized the content.

In total, 150 articles were pulled from Yahoo! News for this method. The articles were labeled with the AllSides Media Bias Rating of the source, and included Yahoo! News’ original content (which AllSides rates as Lean Left).

The purpose of method 2 was to analyze which stories and outlets a user visiting Yahoo! News' homepage without logging in or customizing any content would see during the time frame analyzed.

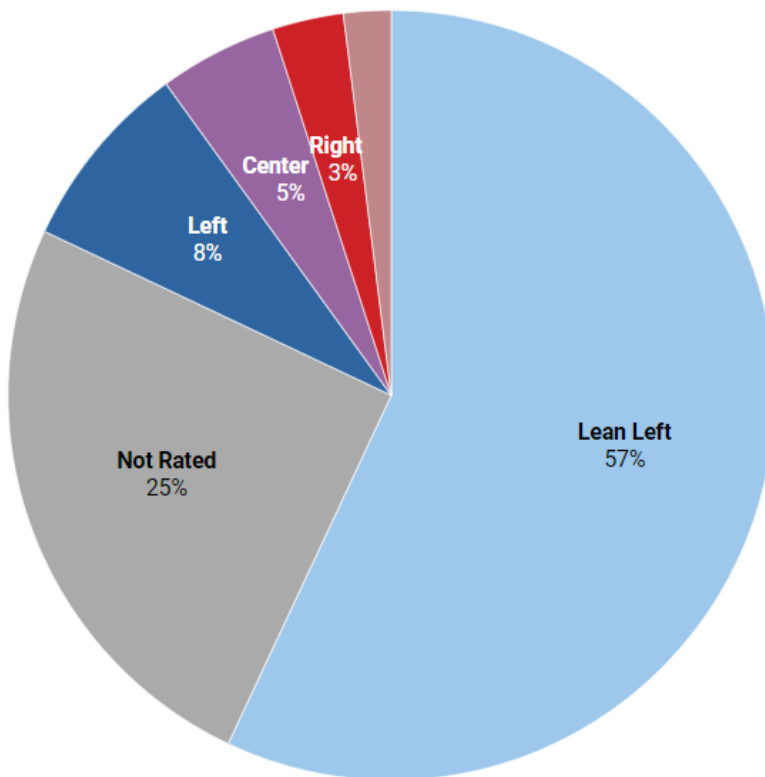

Findings

Through our analysis, AllSides found that Yahoo! News aggregation greatly favored stories from news media outlets that have a left-leaning perspective.

Out of the 588 stories analyzed in method 1 of our analysis, 57% were from a media outlet that AllSides rates as Lean Left.

About 1 in 4 stories were from news outlets that are not rated by AllSides as of May 2022. Many of these consisted of local and international outlets (e.g. Ukrayinska Pravda, a Ukrainian newspaper, due to the ongoing Ukraine-Russia war).

The top 10 most prominent outlets published on Yahoo! News encompassed 64% of all coverage (379 out of 588 stories). They are as follows, with the percent of total stories analyzed displayed for each.

The analysis also found that the majority of top articles featured on Yahoo News' homepage were from outlets on the left. In a 10-day period, 55% of the top 15 stories featured on the homepage were from outlets rated on the left, and just 1% were from outlets on the right.

Only one story from an outlet rated on the right appeared in the homepage analysis – meaning that out of the 10 days analyzed, only once did an outlet on the right appear in the top 15 stories. (See Appendix A for details).

For method 2 of our analysis (reviewing Yahoo! News' homepage content), AllSides found that content from 47 outlets was curated out of the 150 articles analyzed over a 10-day period. Of the 47 outlets analyzed – which treated Yahoo Life, Yahoo Finance, Yahoo Entertainment, Yahoo Style, and “In The Know” by Yahoo as Not Rated and Yahoo News 360 as Mixed – AllSides found that 55% of outlets were on the left (11% Left, 44% Lean Left), 11% were Center, 1% were on the right (0% Right, 1% Lean Right), 32% were Not Rated, and 2% were Mixed.

The top 10 most prominent outlets found in method 2 of the analysis encompassed 57% of the coverage on the days analyzed (85 of 150 stories). They are as follows, with the percent of total stories analyzed displayed for each.

Content collected between April 26, 2022, and May 5, 2022. Each day, the top 15 stories from Yahoo News' homepage were analyzed – 150 stories total. See report for methodology. Source: news.yahoo.com

Six of the top 10 outlets were rated Lean Left by AllSides, and another two were rated Left. One was rated Center (Reuters) and one was Not Rated (“In The Know” by Yahoo).

AllSides also looked at the position of stories on the homepage. This is relevant because a story located in the first position on the page may be clicked on more often than a story in the fifth position.

On the 10 days analyzed, AllSides found that the average position of the first Lean Left outlet was 1.5 (meaning a story from a Lean Left source was most often present in the first or second position). The average position of the first Center outlet was 7.3, Left outlet was 9.4, and Not Rated outlet was 6.5. Outlets on the right didn't register above the 15th position on the homepage.

A story from an outlet rated Lean Left was also the top story in 8 out of 10 days. Similarly, at least 3 of the top 5 stories each day were from outlets rated Lean Left. (Note: Yahoo! News Originals are also rated Lean Left by AllSides).

A slight majority of stories represented in the top 15 stories over a 10-day period were from outlets on the left.
